There has been an increase in the application of the term "sport" to a wider set of non-physical challenges such as video games, also called esports ( ) Tj T* BT /F ipation and organised competition, but these are not widely recognised by mainstream sports organisations.

In order to widen participation, and reduce the impact of losing on less able participants, there has been an introduction of non-competitive physical activity to traditionally competitive events such as school sports days, although moves like this are often controversial.[13][14]

In competitive events, participants are graded or classified based on their "
